Manager Commentary

In the month of April, global equities closed lower with US major indices such as S&P 500, Dow Jones Industrial, and Nasdaq Index closed -8.80%, -4.91%, -13.26% respectively. This was mainly driven by combination of Fed's tightening policy, growth concern especially on China and uncertainty on Russia-Ukraine. Rising inflation and tight labor market also pushed US Treasury yield higher. On another note, recent China Covid-19 outbreak might soften China economic growth in 2022. Mainly due to the zero-covid policy imposed by the Chinese government. Meanwhile, market still wait for more meaningful stimulus/policy support for China's economy to recover in the second half of 2022. Despite domestic selling pressure, foreign inflow has supported JCI in this level so far, as JCI closed +2.23% in the month of April.
