Manager Commentary

Asia Pacific ex Japan equities closed the month of April slightly higher, helped by gains in Australia, one the region's largest markets. However, disappointing returns from China and Taiwan weighed on overall regional performance, as did general concerns about the monetary tightening cycle in the US and the potential of global recession. The MSCI China Index retreated over April. Economic data confirmed that China's economy was recovering strongly after the lifting of pandemic-related restrictions, with China's GDP expanding by a stronger-than-expected annual rate of 4.5% in the first quarter of 2023, helped by a rebound in household spending and rising factory activity. However, shares were negatively affected by concerns over whether China could sustain the rebound in growth. Additionally, there were concerns that the US would impose a further crackdown over investment in China. Australian shares advanced modestly, helped by strong returns in the technology, health care and industrials sectors. However, energy and materials stocks lagged as the prospect of a US recession and concerns over the sustainability of China's economic recovery weighed on export heavy commodity firms. Elsewhere, South Korea stocks recorded modest gains, Hong Kong shares closed the month broadly flat while equities in Taiwan lost ground as index-heavyweight Taiwan Semiconductor Manufacturing was hit by concerns over its outlook. ASEAN markets were mixed. Indonesia was the strongest market, closing the month solidly higher, with the Philippines also advancing solidly. On the other hand, equities in Thailand slumped and stock markets in Malaysia and Singapore declined slightly. Japanese equities advanced, with the Nikkei 225 Index hitting an eight-month high towards the end of the month. The yen weakened as new Bank of Japan (BOJ) governor Kazuo Ueda opted to keep interest rates at -0.1% and maintained Japan's current yield curve control policy. Nevertheless, Mr Ueda announced a review of the central bank's ultra-loose monetary policy and dropped a part of its forward guidance on rates, prompting speculation that he may adjust the BOJ's policy ahead of the central bank's June meeting.
