Manager Commentary

Global equities declined over August as stronger-than-expected US economic data dashed hopes that rates would soon be lowered. Continued signs that momentum in China's economy was stalling also undermined sentiment, with the nation seeing further troubling developments in its real estate sector. In general, developed markets outperformed emerging ones. At a sector level, energy companies were a rare bright spot, while utilities were the weakest. Asia equity market corrected in the month of August on the back of recent lackluster economic data coming out of China together with hawkish statement by the Fed during the Jackson hole meeting. The European markets also posted corrections in August on the back of recent hawkish statements by the Fed and ECB. US Equity market also posted negative return in August as investors starting to price in a high chance that we may be living in a higher interest rate environment for longer period of time on the back of still stubborn inflation that is still above the Fed's desired target of 2%.

US bonds declined over August as the Federal Reserve signalled that US rates would stay higher for longer and credit rating agency Fitch cut the US's AAA credit rating to AA+, citing the debt burden and recent debt-ceiling stand-off. The yield curve became less inverted as the US raised its debt issuance target for the coming quarter, putting upward pressure on long-dated bond yields. In the 10-year part of the curve, Treasury yields briefly traded as high as 4.35%, the highest level in almost 16 years, before closing the month around 4.1%.
