Manager Commentary

LQ45 rose 0.69% on total return basis in February. Foreign investors turned net buyers for the first time in 3 months, adding USD379m of equities during the period. The amount was, however, inflated by a huge crossing of USD250m in a health services provider. Information technology led as bellwether tech, GOTO, saw strong buying interests. Consumer staple names, on the other hand, was sold down during the period. Indonesia reported 4Q22 GDP year-on-year (YoY) growth of +5.01%, slightly ahead of expectation. Net exports were the main driver, offsetting the normalization of private consumption after the pent-up demand prior to the Lebaran Holiday. Investments also tapered off in the quarter as machinery, equipment demand decelerated. The country posted +0.16% and +5.47% of month-on-month (MoM) and YoY inflation respectively in February. Bank Indonesia (BI) maintained the benchmark rate at 5.75% as the inflation trajectory was in-line with the Central Bank's forecast. Separately, it became more optimistic on the economy as it expects GDP growth to be near the top range of its 4.5-5.3% range in FY23. All in all, the economy appeared to be on a firmer footing. Based on our market trend and fundamental assessment, the overall market outlook of Indonesian equities remained negative during February. In the portfolio, we slightly increased equity exposure during mid-month due to slight recovery in market sentiment, while reduced the exposure back to around 68% at the end of February. Overall, we still maintained an underweight positioning in equities. The fund underperformed the benchmark in the month of February. Negative stock selections in the material and consumer discretionary sectors impacted performance. Energy names in the portfolio offset, however, the negative performance partially.
