Manager Commentary

China equities opened the new year on a downbeat note with both onshore and offshore markets falling by close to 10% in USD terms. A feature of the market in January was the outperformance of value stocks. The MSCI China A Onshore Value Index fell by 2.2% in the month compared to the Growth index falling by 15.7%. In particular, there was a notable rotation into stocks with high dividend yields. This was spurred partly by falling domestic bond yields – the China 10 year government bond yield is now considerably less than the yield of many onshore and offshore equity indexes. In addition, most high dividend stocks are state owned enterprises, which are likely to maintain or even increase their dividend payouts to support local and central government revenues. Another feature of the China A market last month was the technical selling pressure from the liquidation of so-called “snowball” structured products. Popular in 2020-2021, snowballs were designed to pay investors a coupon if the market price remained within a set range. As China indexes fell towards the lower end of the range, this triggered selling as brokers looked to hedge positions. It seems that most of these derivatives have likely already fallen through their lower strike prices, so further selling pressure from this source is expected to be less intense.

China equity market fell sharply in January as recent economic data fell below market expectations even after recent government effort to jumpstart the economy with property sector remains a drag. US Equity market rallied further in January as data showed U.S. inflation cooled further in December, cementing expectations that the Federal Reserves would stick to its rate cut projections this year.
