Manager Commentary

Global equities were mixed in January, with central banks dampening rampant speculation of rate cuts as soon as March. Japanese stocks surged, while eurozone and US shares recorded modest gains. However, emerging market equities declined, dragged down by steep falls in China. At a sector level, communication services, information technology and health care were the strongest sectors, while materials, real estate and utilities declined the most. US bonds sold off as hopes of early cuts in interest rates in 2024 faded. The yield on the 10-year Treasury bond reached a peak of almost 4.2% mid-month, before closing the month at just under 4.0%. Overall, yields closed January about 10 basis points (bps) higher in the 10-year part of the curve while yields eased slightly at the very short end of the curve, causing the inversion of the yield curve to lessen.

China equity market fell sharply in January as recent economic data fell below market expectations even after recent government effort to jumpstart the economy with property sector remains a drag. The European markets also rallied in January on the back of cooling inflation and expectations that we have reached peak of rate cycle. US Equity market rallied further in January as data showed U.S. inflation cooled further in December, cementing expectations that the Federal Reserves would stick to its rate cut projections this year.

Global equities closed 2023 on a strong note, buoyed by the Federal Reserve's more dovish stance with US policymakers forecasting rate cuts over the coming year. The news reinforced investors' belief that rates were now at their peak and inflation had now been tamed. At a sector level, real estate stocks surged, with industrials shares also enjoying solid gains. In contrast, the energy sector weakened as oil and natural gas prices weakened.
