Manager Commentary

LQ45 fell -1.29% on total return basis in July. The market began the month weakly as investors were concerned about Fed posting another aggressive rate action following a 75bps increase back in June. Meanwhile, benchmark rates around the globe were on an upward trajectory as inflation ran rampant. Market recovered in the latter part of the month as investors turned more positive on the back of strong quarterly results. Coincidentally, Fed also displayed a softer stance on future rate hikes in the July credit policy meeting. Foreign investors were net sellers for the third consecutive month as risk appetite waned on rate uncertainties. Energy sector was the best performing sector, supported by strong commodity prices. Healthcare and Consumer Discretionary sectors, on the other hand, lagged. Based on our market trend and fundamental assessment, the overall market outlook of Indonesian equities has deteriorated during the month and moved from positive to negative territory by the end of the month. As a result, we started to reduce equity exposure in the portfolio since early July, and further moved to a more defensive positioning around mid-July. By the end of the month, equity exposure was reduced to around 80%. The fund outperformed the benchmark in the month of July. Positive stock selections in the consumer discretionary sector delivered bulk of the outperformance.
