Manager Commentary

US equity markets suffered during the month of June as anxieties over a possible recession continue to weigh on investor sentiment. The yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury note has doubled since the beginning of the year to ~3.0% level. The FOMC raised its fed funds target by 75 bps at its June meeting, the largest increase since 1994. Upside surprises in inflation and rising measures of inflation expectations are likely to keep the Fed under pressure to tighten further and meet hawkish market expectations.

Economic projections show that the Fed is prepared to continue tightening aggressively, despite a worsening economic outlook. The Federal Reserve Chair, Jerome Powell also stated that there's "no guaranteed" that the Fed can achieve a soft landing through raising interest rates to slow the economy without causing a recession and raising the unemployment rate. To add, the U.S. Manufacturing PMI fell sharply to 53.0 in June (56.1 in May 2022) and is at its lowest since the U.S. economic recovery began in June 2020. The service sector also showed the same trend in June, as the U.S. non-manufacturing PMI weakened to 51.6 (53.4 in the prior month). Moving to Europe, it also wrapped the month with a negative tone as EU investors remained concern toward the equity market on the back of extreme volatility as prices soared, central banks turned hawkish, and Russia invaded Ukraine situation.
