Manager Commentary

Asia ex Japan equities advanced moderately over June, helped by a recovery in Chinese stocks. However, the region closed the month off its best, undermined by disappointment over the size of stimulus measures in China and hawkish statements from central banks in developed markets, particularly the US. Chinese equities rebounded strongly over the first half of June, boosted by growing expectations of further fiscal and monetary support. However, shares later lost some of these gains as data highlighted the extent of the slowdown and the effect it was having on Chinese companies, with industrial profits dropping by 18.8% from a year earlier in the first five months of 2023. While the authorities did announce support measures in June, these came in at the lower end of expectations. Nevertheless, Chinese Premier Li Qiang indicated the nation was still on track to reach its annual growth target of around with the pace of growth expected to pick up in the second quarter compared to the first quarter's 4.5% expansion. Australian shares closed a volatile month modestly higher. The Reserve Bank of Australia unexpectedly raised interest rates by 25 basis points to 4.1% but fears of another unexpected rate hike were allayed by softer-than-expected inflation data for May. Meanwhile, following their surge during the previous month, the tech-heavy markets of Taiwan and South Korea delivered a more muted performance in June. The annual inflation rate in Taiwan eased to 2.02% in May, the lowest reading since July 2021, while South Korea's annual inflation rate slid to 3.3%, the lowest level since October 2021. ASEAN markets retreated slightly overall. Singapore delivered the strongest gains. While economic activity in the city state eased from April's five-month high in May, inflation is CISO decelerating, with the annual rate falling to a five-month low of 5.1% in May. Elsewhere, returns in the Philippines, Thailand and Indonesia were roughly flat while Malays a retreated slightly. Japanese equities rallied strongly over June, outperforming other developed markets in local Currency terms. Both the Nikkei 225 Index and broad-based TOPIX hit fresh 33-year highs, driven by solid corporate earnings, ongoing yen weakness and strong overseas demand for Japanese shares. The Bank of Japan maintained its accommodative stance, keeping interest rates at -0.1% despite increasing signs of a broadening in price pressures across the Japanese economy as it cited high uncertainties in the outlook.
