Manager Commentary

LQ45 rose 1.21% on total return basis in March, with foreign investors being net buyers for the period. Utilities faced headwind on the back of weak crude oil price. The financial sector, on the other hand, performed strongly as margins outlook remained rosy in near term. The country recorded higher than expected trade surplus of USD5.5b in February. Exports came inline but imports were much below expectation mainly due to the contraction of non-oil & gas imports. Inflation in March came in at +0.18% month-on-month (MoM), a small acceleration from +0.16% MoM in the previous month. On a yearly basis, the country recorded a March inflation of +4.97% year-on-year (YoY). Elsewhere, Bank Indonesia (BI) maintained the benchmark rate at 5.75%. The Central Bank is confident that the current monetary policy is sufficient to maintain the core inflation within 1% range of 3% in 1H. BI also expects global economic growth to hit 2.6% for 2023 on the back of China reopening and fewer supply chain disruptions. Based on our market trend and fundamental assessment, the overall market outlook of Indonesian equities remained modestly negative during March. In the portfolio, we maintained an underweight position in equities at around 68% during the month. The fund performed generally in line with the benchmark in the month of March. The underperformance in the material sector was offset by the positive contribution from the consumer staples sector.
