Manager Commentary

Asian equity markets rebounded sharply in November as growing hopes that China would ease its zero-COVID policy boosted markets across the region. Markets were also lifted by signs that inflationary pressures may be diminishing. Australian stocks closed November at the highest level in almost seven months. Elsewhere, Taiwanese shares rebounded strongly as investors piled back into semiconductor stocks. Indian equities also rose, closing the month at a record high in local currency terms although the monthly gains lagged those in China. ASEAN markets underperformed the broader region as investors rotated out of Southeast Asia and into China, Taiwan and South Korea. Philippines and Singapore posted solid gains, but Malaysia, Thailand and Indonesia were laggards. Finally, in Japan, equity market rose as the market positively reacted to signs of easing inflationary pressures.

Asia markets also extended its gain in November, underpinned by higher-than-expected 3Q22 results, as well as the expectation of China reopening in 1Q23. Recent Less-hawkish Fed officials commentary also helped to fuel the rally in global equities including Asian market. US equities extended its gain in November as lower than expected October CPI print provided relief to the market that Fed rate hike cycle could finally be coming to an end sooner than expected. During a recent meeting, the Fed's Powell also came out with a slightly less hawkish tone which the market digested as the possibility for a soft landing. November private payrolls data shows the slowing growth trend where November ADP private payrolls numbers increased by 127K vs consensus for 198K, showing job growth slowed by the most since January 2021 which was adding to the slowing growth narrative.
