Manager Commentary

LQ45 rose by 0.39% on total return basis in October. The utilities and healthcare sector were the best performers during the month while the technology names lagged. Decent quarterly numbers in the healthcare sector attracted buying during the month. Ecommerce names, on the other hand, remained under pressure as the market shunned loss-making companies. On the macro front, Indonesia recorded a USD5b trade surplus in September. That said, both exports and imports decelerated during the period with iron & steel and coal exports and consumer goods imports slowed. October inflation print came in better than the expectation of +5.71% year-on-year (YoY) in which food, beverage and tobacco were the main drivers. Bank Indonesia (BI) raised the benchmark rate by 50bps to 4.75%. The Central Bank sees its decision as a pre-emptive move to manage inflation and currency stability. BI believes inflation to peak around 6% before tapering down to sub 4% in 2023. It cites high global inflation and slow growth as challenges entering next year. Based on our market trend and fundamental assessment, the overall market outlook of Indonesian equities has weakened from neutral towards negative during the month of October. In the portfolio, we have gradually reduced equity exposure from full-investment positioning (i.e. 79%) towards 69% by the end of the month. The portfolio outperformed the benchmark in the month of October. The underweight position in one of the bellwether e-commerce was the main driver of the outperformance. A handful of financials names also contributed positively.
