AstraZeneca Revised Efficacy to 76 Percent

Kontan

British pharmaceutical company, AstraZeneca, claims the efficacy of their Covid-19 vaccine reaches 76 percent, down three points from previously reported. AstraZeneca released this new efficacy figure after an independent supervisory team raised concerns the company was using outdated data when providing previous reports. "The main analysis is consistent with our preliminary analysis released earlier, and confirms that the Covid-19 vaccine is very effective in adults," said Mene Pangalos, Executive Vice President of AstraZeneca's R&D. As quoted by Reuters, this latest data was obtained from trials of 32,400 volunteers in the US, Chile and Peru. From all that data, 190 people were infected with the corona virus even though they had been vaccinated. Previous data showed only 147 infections. This change in efficacy rates comes after US health authorities fear AstraZeneca is using outdated information when reporting vaccine trial results.
